GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS:

- It is recommended that this guide be printed in color or used on an electronic device.
- The timeline shown for each part should be considered as a general guide for the timing of media playback and interviews. Refer to each talk outline for specific instructions. In advance of each session, obtain from the speakers the cues for playing media during the parts.
- The durations shown for all videos are approximate. In most cases, the timing has been rounded to the nearest minute.
- Use the “Notes” sections to record helpful information, such as key phrases that provide timing cues.
- Substitute shared handheld microphones for standing microphones if necessary.
- Use talk title images as follows:
  - Display the talk title image file as each talk is being introduced by the session chairman or by the preceding speaker. When a talk is being introduced from the main lectern, fade to the talk title image file when the session chairman or speaker completes his introduction. When the session chairman introduces a talk from a secondary microphone, fade to the image file at the first mention of the speaker’s name or the talk title, whichever comes first.
  - Fade to the speaker just before he begins speaking. Ensure that stage crew members do not appear in the shot. Do not instruct participants to wait until they see themselves on a monitor to begin speaking, as this will result in their looking off-camera when the video is taken live.
  - For dramas, when the session chairman completes his introduction, fade to the talk title image for five seconds, fade to black, then play the video.
- Always allow countdown clocks and music-video presentations to finish playing completely.
