TO ALL BODIES OF ELDERS

Re: Arrangements to view JW Broadcasting monthly programs

Dear Brothers:

We have received many comments of appreciation for the new JW Broadcasting Internet television station. Since there are many English-speaking publishers who do not have access to the Internet, we would like to share the following options that would allow such individuals to view the featured program each month on JW Broadcasting.

Publishers who have access to the Internet could be encouraged to invite some in their congregation or field service group to their home to watch the monthly program. This privilege could possibly be rotated among a number of families who have Internet access.

Another option is to use Kingdom Halls that have video equipment installed. The bodies of elders of congregations using the Kingdom Hall can decide a convenient time each month that the one-hour featured program can be shown to those who do not have Internet access. If there is more than one congregation using the Kingdom Hall, it might be practical to have individuals in those congregations view the program together. Perhaps this could be on a Saturday afternoon or at another convenient time when the Kingdom Hall is not normally in use. Such an arrangement would not be considered a congregation meeting. Thus, opening or closing prayers would not be needed.

Be assured of our warm Christian love and greetings.

Your brothers,

Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses
